FIRE IN FACTORY
BRINGS PERIL TO THEATRE DISTRICT

Broadway Playhouses Filled with Smoke
as Result of Blaze in West Thirtieth
Street, Which Is Fanned by Wind
Into Alarming Proportions.

FALLING ROOF MENACES
LIVES OF THE FIREMEN

Series of Explosions Adds to the Danger, and Residents of Houses in the Neighborhood
Are Ordered to Gather Up Valuables and Leave Their Homes.

A fire that the gale whipped into a dangerous blaze started in the big six-story factory building at Nos. 114-120 West Thirtieth street to-day, and the apparatus summoned on three alarms were for a time helpless to control the flames. The building was destroyed and $100,000 damage done before the firemen got the upper hand. The roof of the building fell in, imperiling the lives of firemen who were directing streams of water from rear fire-escapes. They were ordered down by Chief Croker and barely escaped with their lives.

After the fire had gained headway, shooting up from floor to floor, and finally bursting out through the roof, the neighborhood was shaken by a series of explosions supposed to be gasolene. The police, under instructions from Chief Croker, ordered all the occupants of neighboring dwellings and flat-houses to get out and take with them what they wish to save. Great billows of smoke were blown by the gale over Broadway, and the entire theatre district from Thirty-third street down to Twenty-fifth street was enveloped in a black pall through which burning embers dropped to the street.

All Got Out Safely.

The fire burst from the windows of the factory on the third floor at 1:45 o'clock. The upper floors of the building are occupied by the Hopkins Electrotype Company. The Newman Art Manufacturing Company occupies the first floor, and the Schenck Works have their workshop in the basement and ground floor. As far as can be learned, no one was in the fire started. The fire was thirty men in the building but all got out safely.

That the fire had smoldered for some time before any one became aware of it is the opinion of Chief Croker, because of the headway it had gained before the first alarm was sent in. From five windows on the third floor of the structure fire burst almost simultaneously.

The first alarm was turned in at 1:35, and when the companies got there the blaze had entire possession of all exits and entrances leading to the upper stories. A second alarm was turned in at 2:20 and a third at 2:45, after the explosions took place and great spirals of flame drove up through the smoke.

Theatres Filled with Smoke.

The wind was blowing directly from the west, carrying the smoke over Broadway and as far as Sixth avenue. The smoke drifted into the entrances of Proctor's, Daly's and the Fifth Avenue Theatres, as well as the Weber Music Hall and the Bijou, giving the audiences a state that the authorities feared would be entirely unbearable. Though there was no actual panic in any of the theatres a great many men and women left their seats and hurried into the street.

On the fourth and fifth floors of the burning building the electrotyping company, of Rooney & Ottman and the W. J. Kenworthy Printing Company have great presses that the Building Department declared some time ago to be dangerous because of their enormous weight.

Public School No. 25 is on the west side of the building. It was saved from the flames by the sweep of the gale eastward. After the intense heat in the street and the danger of death on the fire-escapes made it practically impossible to fight the fire from three directions, the firemen were compelled to climb to the roof of the school house and direct their streams of water down upon the blaze.

There was a scene of wild confusion in West Twenty-ninth street after the police ordered the occupants of houses in the north side to take shelter in the theatres and other boarding-houses. The street, and scores of women carrying dogs and birds and the fire-escapes, were a scene of confusion. The firemen were ordered to make every effort to extinguish the flames and were painfully injured. The firemen were ordered to make every effort to extinguish the flames and were painfully injured. GOULD LETTER WRITER
CARRIED BIG REVOLVER

Leighton, Who Has Annoyed Helen Gould with Love Notes, Arrested at Bible Training-School—Believed to Be Insane.

Albert E. Leighton, who is forty-two years old and says he lives at No. 41 South Nineteenth street, Philadelphia, is a prisoner in the East Fifty-first street station, technically charged with violating the city ordinance relating to the carrying of concealed weapons.

According to the police, Leighton is the man who for some time has been sending letters to Miss Helen M. Gould, in some proposing marriage and in others asking that he be engaged as "head man of her home."

These letters, of which there are several, have been received and opened by L. A. Hansen, Miss Gould's secretary, who did not permit them to pass into Miss Gould's hands. Frequently they were returned to the writer. One of the return receipts was found on Leighton when he was taken into custody.

The clerk at the training school saw Leighton's name on the register and recognized it as that of a man who had written letters to Miss Gould and notified the police. In his pockets when arrested was found a heavy revolver of English make.

An ambulance surgeon who saw Leighton in the police station said he appeared to be a harmless lunatic.

In the man's possession was found a letter addressed to "Miss H. M. Gould, Bible Training School, Forty-ninth street and Lexington avenue, New York City." It read:

"Do you want me to return as head of your house? Answer to-morrow. Albert E. Leighton. Songs 45-54."

(Special to The Evening World.)
NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 12.—With the town in the clutch of the ice king to-day's racing had but little attraction for the town folk or the visitors either. The Fair Grounds course, little protected as it is against the sweep of the wind, was not a place for anything like comfortable enjoyment of outdoor sports, and it did not need the counter attraction of the fair to cause it to be practically deserted.

The management of the Crescent City Jockey Club, in its efforts to draw a respectable Monday gathering, had had but little success. The programme offered was made up of a series of conditioned events, and the company engaged was in keeping with the conditions, a state of affairs that must have made the management look at least a little discouraged.

As nearly all of them are not residents of the city, the local Board of Education to find teachers to replace them. It was only natural that such news should be made public as news of St. Valentine's Day.

SAYS CHANGES IN TREATY

Refuses to Submit Documents as Amended by the Senate to Nations Interested—Reply of the Upper House Is a Call for the Facts as to President's San Domingo Agreement.

President Roosevelt's arrival in New York this afternoon to attend a series of dinners and receptions, has aroused among local Republicans the hope that he may, at the Republican Club dinner to-night, make plain his attitude toward the "recalcitrant" Senate of the United States.

It is hoped that he will amplify the statement, made by Secretary of State Hay in Washington, after the President's departure for New York to-day, that the arbitration treaties, as amended by the Senate, will not be sent to the countries with which they were negotiated.

In this statement Secretary Hay said the Senate amendment to the treaties was a step backward.

The Senate to-day answered this criticism by calling on the President for information concerning the San Domingo agreement.

The President held a reception from 4 to 5 o'clock this afternoon at the Republican Club. After the Republican Club banquet at the Waldorf to-night he will go to the Press Club banquet at the Hotel Astor. Tomorrow night he will attend the dinner of the Hungarian Republican Club at "Little Hungary," in East Houston street, and at midnight will start back to Washington to take an active hand in the treaty controversy between the Senate and the Department of State.

PRESIDENT HERE BEGINS
HOLIDAY OF STRENUOUSITY

President Roosevelt arrived in town at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon to enjoy a vacation of two days, during which he will attend two receptions and three dinners, and acquire some personal impressions of local political conditions.

There was a big crowd at the Twenty-third Street Station of the Pennsylvania road to greet him, and thousands thronged the Fifth avenue pavements as he drove, under police escort, to the Republican Club in West Fourth street.

The President left Washington at 10 o'clock this morning in a special train of two private cars, which was run at the second section of the regular New York express. He was accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. W. H. Cowles, Secretary Loeb, Secretary of War Taft and Mrs. Taft, and Dr. Charles F. Stokes, U. S. N., and a corps of Secret Service agents.

Closely Guarded.

The train arrived in Jersey City on time. As usual, the President stopped at the locomotive to shake hands with the engineer and fireman as he walked to the elevator, which took him to the ground floor of the station. Chief Murphy, of Jersey City, had a big guard of policemen in and around the station. Owing to the holiday, the crowd there was small.

Police Commissioner McArdoo and Chief Inspector Cortright on behalf of the city of New York greeted the President as he stepped from the train. They were accompanied by Detective-Sergeants Finston and Downing, who will act as the personal guard of the President while he is in the city.

Commissioner McArdoo had supplied for the use of the President a big open double carriage, drawn by four horses, newly sharp-shod by the police. The carriage was driven by William D. Murphy and Alexander Ketchum, comprising a committee of the Republican Club, also members of the President's staff.

The President rode in the carriage to the Waldorf, where he was met by a reception committee of thirty-four, headed by Morris Land, as Chairman. Among them were Governor Odell, Timothy Woodruff, of New York, and a number of other prominent men. The President was met by a reception committee of thirty-four, headed by Morris Land, as Chairman.
